2-day moot to begin at UoM tomorrow

Bureau report

PESHAWAR: Pakistan Society of Development Economists (PSDE), in collaboration with the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE) and the University of Malakand, is going to organise its 2nd two-day conference on June 13 and 14.

The conference, centered around the theme "Unleashing the Economic Potential of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa", will take place at the UoP campus, said a press release issued here on Sunday.

The two-day event will bring together over 400 participants from across Khyber Pakhtunkhwa, including known national experts, policymakers, development practitioners, entrepreneurs, students, and scholars.

The conference aims to provide a platform for vibrant discussions and insightful debates on key economic and social issues, contributing to the development and progress of the region.

Under the overarching theme, the conference will feature 10 sub-themes, covering critical dimensions that shape the economic landscape of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. Topics such as sustainable development, entrepreneurship, innovation, infrastructure, human capital, and regional connectivity will be explored in-depth by the speakers and panelists.

One of the highlights of this year's conference is the inclusive and diverse participation from universities across Pakistan.

News Desk

ISLAMABAD: In collaboration with the Pakistan Society of Development Economists (PSDE), the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE) organized a dynamic and engaging 02-Day Conference at the University of Malakand, Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. The conference, titled “Unleashing the Economic Potential of KPK,” brought together local leaders, experts, and stakeholders to address regional problems and explore indigenous solutions.

The conference commenced with an inauguration session, where participants reflected on the past 37 years of conducting general meetings and conferences, recognizing the pressing need for local solutions to tackle the diverse range of issues impacting our communities. It was emphasized that efficiency, thoughtful consideration of local issues, and regional consensus are crucial elements for building networks and linkages between academia, government, and other key stakeholders. The collaboration with the University of Malakand was unveiled as a significant step toward achieving these goals.

The conference aims to provide a forum for robust discussions and the development of innovative solutions to address the challenges faced by Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. The diverse range of topics presented by the speakers promises to generate thought-provoking debates and indigenous ideas, which can shape the region's future.

During the opening session, Dr. Nadeem ul Haque, Vice-Chancellor of PIDE, emphasized the importance of conferences in the Pakistan Society of Development Economists (PSDE) mission to promote research and collaboration among social scitists in Pakistan. Conferences offer a platform for engaging with the public, gathering diverse ideas, and emphasizing the significance of collective effort and innovative thinking to address Pakistan's social issues.

Dr. Rasheed Ahmed, VC, University of Malakand, said at the occasion that the conference featured several insightful sessions. The first session, titled “Current Crises and the Character of Economy,” emphasized the need to re-evaluate systems and policies to ensure a sustainable future for Pakistan.

Dr. DurreNayab, PRO Vice Chan-

celor PIDE, said that Pakistan has a long history of relying on external sources for policies & development. This has hindered our ability to progress as a nation & limited our autonomy.

The second session, titled “Government, Academia, and Industry: The Trinity of Growth,” shed light on the interdependence of these three sectors in shaping the country's future. The session emphasized the importance of quality education, nurturing talent, and fostering creativity, critical thinking, and problem-solving skills within academic institutions while highlighting the role of the government in providing necessary support and policies.

The conference provided a platform for fruitful discussions, constructive debates, and exploring ideas to pave the way for a stronger, more independent, and self-sufficient Pakistan. It encouraged young minds to actively shape the nation's future and contribute to a brighter tomorrow.

In conclusion, regulations are necessary to ensure fair and transparent markets. They are not designed to hinder businesses but rather to protect consumers, employees, and the environment. However, the government

Country should break away from external reliance, say economists

ISLAMABAD: Leading economists of the country have stressed the need for breaking away from external reliance and take control of Pakistan's destiny by developing policies that truly benefit the people of the country.

They said this while addressing a conference titled, "Unleashing the Economic Potential of KPK," jointly organised by the Pakistan Society of Development Economists (PSDE) and the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE).

The conference was attended by local leaders, experts, and stakeholders aiming at addressing regional problems and explore indigenous solutions.

On the topic of government, academia and industry, they said that the trinity of growth education is supposed to be opening up of minds, but how often do we talk about opening up of minds? They said, "We need to train our children to think creatively, and critically, and develop skills that we desperately need for our economy".

They shed light on the interdependence of these three sectors in shaping the country's future. The session emphasized the importance of quality education, nurturing talent, and fostering creativity, critical thinking, and problem-solving skills within academic institutions while highlighting the role of the government in providing necessary support and policies. Furthermore, the session underscored the importance of industry-academia collaboration in applying knowledge and skills to real-world scenarios.

Debating on Natural

said that the province has up to 70 to 80 percent of the natural water resources of the country, but unfortunately, these significant resources remained under-utilised. They said that utilisation of water resources of the KPK would not only provide inexpensive electricity but will also create thousands of jobs and bring millions of acres of barren lands under cultivation enabling the country to become self-sufficient in food production and also export the surplus.

Debating on the current situation and charter of economy, they said it was an essential document that outlines a framework for cooperation between political parties to ensure the country's economic stability and progress. However, it is not enough to have on paper; it needs to be implemented effectively.

The participants reflected on the past 37 years of conducting general meetings and conferences, recognising the pressing need for local solutions to tackle the diverse range of issues impacting our communities. It was emphasized that efficiency, thoughtful consideration of local issues, and regional consensus are crucial elements for building networks and linkages between academia, government, and other key stakeholders. The collaboration with the University of Malakand was unveiled as a significant step toward achieving these goals.

Professor Dr Athar Maqsood of the National University of Sciences and Technology, while speaking on the occasion, said, "Our youth, remember, to become crown gold, you must brave the fire. Embracing challenges, institutions need strong economists and mathematicians to shape a brighter future".

Dr Nadeemul Haque, vice-chancellor (VC) PIDE emphasized the importance of conferences in the PSDE mission to promote research and collaboration among social scientists in Pakistan. Conferences offer a platform for engaging with the public, gathering diverse ideas, and emphasizing the significance of collective effort and innovative thinking to address Pakistan's social issues. The vice-chancellor expressed the need to break away from external reliance and take control of Pakistan's destiny by developing policies that truly benefit the people. Conferences provide the opportunity to share knowledge, exchange ideas, and create relevant solutions while fostering collaborations, strengthening networks, and ensuring the translation of research findings into policies and practices that improve lives.

Dr Rasheed Ahmed, VC University of Malakand, said at the occasion that the conference featured several insightful sessions. The first session, titled, "Current Crises and the Charter of Economy," emphasized the need to re-evaluate systems and policies to ensure a sustainable future for Pakistan. It addressed issues such as the double taxation system and the importance of effectively implementing the Charter of Economy for economic stability and progress.

Dr Durre Nayab, PRO Vice Chancellor PIDE, said that Pakistan has a long history of relying on external sources for policies and development. This has hindered our economic autonomy. But it does not have to be that way. We can take control of our own destiny and make policies that benefit our people.

Another session focused on the impact of regulations on the economy. While recognising the necessity of regulations to ensure fair and transparent markets, the session highlighted the need for relevant and transparent regulations to avoid hindering economic growth.

The conference provided a platform for fruitful discussions, constructive debates, and exploring ideas to pave the way for a stronger, more independent, and self-sufficient Pakistan. It encouraged young minds to actively shape the nation's future and contribute to a brighter tomorrow.

In conclusion, regulations are necessary to ensure fair and transparent markets.

They are not designed to hinder businesses but rather to protect consumers, employees, and the environment.

However, the government must ensure relevant and transparent regulations to avoid hindering economic growth.

The conference aims to provide a forum for robust discussions and the development of innovative solutions to address the challenges faced by Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa.

The diverse range of topics presented by the speakers promises to generate thought-provoking debates and indigenous ideas, which can shape the region's future. The organizers invite all stakeholders to join this vital conversation, contribute their ideas and insights, and collectively unlock the economic potential of KPK for

A dynamic and engaging two-day conference titled "Unleashing the Economic Potential of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa" was organized by the Pakistan Institute of Development Economics (PIDE) in collaboration with the Pakistan Society of Development Economists (PSDE) and officially commenced at the University of Malakand (MoU) in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa.

The conference aimed to bring together local leaders, experts, and stakeholders to address regional problems and explore indigenous solutions, as stated in a press release issued on Tuesday.

During the inauguration session, participants reflected on the significance of conducting general meetings and conferences over the past 37 years, recognizing the pressing need for local solutions to tackle the diverse range of issues impacting communities.

During the opening session, Dr Nadeem ul Haq, vice-chancellor of PIDE, emphasized the importance of conferences in the Pakistan Society of Development Economists' (PSDE) mission to promote research and collaboration among social scientists in Pakistan.

Conferences offered a platform for engaging with the public, gathering diverse ideas, and emphasizing the significance of collective efforts and innovative thinking to address Pakistan's social issues.

The vice-chancellor stressed the need to break away from external reliance and take control of Pakistan's destiny by developing policies that truly benefit the people. Conferences provided the opportunity to share knowledge, exchange ideas, and create relevant solutions while fostering collaborations, strengthening networks, and ensuring the translation of research findings into policies and practices that improve lives.

Dr Rasheed Ahmed, VC, University of Malakand, highlighted the insightful sessions featured in the conference. The first session, titled "Current Crises and the Charter of Economy," emphasized the need to re-evaluate systems and policies to ensure a sustainable future for Pakistan.

Dr Durre-Nayab, Pro-vice chancellor PIDE, stated that Pakistan has a long history of relying on external sources for policies and development, hindering the nation's progress and limiting its autonomy.

The second session, titled "Government, Academia, and Industry: The Trinity of Growth," aimed to shed light on the interdependence of these three sectors in shaping the country's future.

PIDE conference concludes with a tribute to women

FAISAL SHEIKH

ISLAMABAD: The conference concludes with a powerful tribute to remarkable women who are catalysts for change, empowering others and fostering hope for future generations. Shattering stereotypes and paving the way for Pashtun women to dream bigger and reach for the stars.

Today was the 2nd and concluding day of the conference. The day started with the Session titled: Breaking Barriers: Women's Journey towards Equality and Empowerment; the Session was dedicated to celebrating the courage, resilience, and determination of these women who have challenged traditional societal roles and made their own mark. The panelists were inspiring women who have become catalysts for change, empowering others and fostering a sense of hope for future generations by amplifying the voices of incredible ladies. They have shattered stereotypes and paved the way for future generations of Pashtun women to dream bigger and reach for the stars. Their relentless efforts have not gone unnoticed and have served as an inspiration to many. This Session aimed to raise awareness and promote dialogue, inspiring individuals and communities to break down all the barriers and create a more inclusive society for women. Women are our pride. They never tire or complain but are always ready to contribute to the community. Speaking at the occasion, Ms. Shad Begum, Ms. Kainat Zia, Ms. Shagufta Malik, a Women Parliamentarian, Dr. Feriha Peracha, and Dr. Noor Jehan, Ex-VC, Swabi said that the KP Women are no exception to this and have repeatedly proven that they are not behind in any count. They have shown exceptional resilience and strength in the face of adversity and have persevered to impact their communities positively. As we celebrate the achievements of Pashtun women, we must also acknowledge the challenges they continue to face. Our society is responsible for creating an environment encouraging and supporting women to pursue their dreams and aspirations. In another session titled "Sustainable Tourism is the way forward for a better tomorrow," panelists said that as the tourism industry continues to grow, it is essential to ensure that it is sustainable and that the impact on the environment and local communities is minimal. To achieve this, we must focus on several areas, including human resources, academia, women's participation, and poverty alleviation.

They further said that human resources are the backbone of any industry, and tourism is no exception. Tourism businesses must invest in their employees and provide them with training and development opportunities. This will not only help to improve the quality of service but also increase employee satisfaction and retention. Investing in human resources can create a more sustainable tourism industry that benefits everyone involved.

Academia also has a significant role to play in the development of sustainable tourism. Research and education are crucial to promoting sustainable tourism practices and developing new sustainable tourism models. Academic institutions can generate knowledge, raise awareness, and provide technical assistance to tourism businesses. By working together, academia and the tourism industry can create a more sustainable future for Women's participation is another critical area attention. Women have always been underrepresented in the tourism industry, particularly in leadership roles. However, women's participation in the industry can have significant economic and social benefits. Creating a more sustainable and inclusive tourism industry empowers women and provides them equal opportunities. This is also a significant factor in the development of sustainable tourism. Many tourism destinations are located in developing countries, where poverty is prevalent. Sustainable tourism can help to alleviate poverty by creating jobs, stimulating local economies, and supporting community development. We can create a more equitable and just world by prioritizing sustainable tourism. Two thought-provoking sessions, the intense Hardware vs. Soft Skills debate, highlighted the importance of balancing technical expertise with interpersonal abilities. And the discussion on embracing the bio-economy also took place.

Dr. Durre Nayab, a renowned researcher, expert and advocate for youth empowerment, took center stage to facilitate an engaging and dynamic session titled "Youth Voices: Unleashing the Potential of the Next Generation."

She commended the courage and intellectual curiosity of the young individuals who graced the stage. Their active participation and thought-provoking questions were a testament to the untapped potential of the next generation. The session successfully empowered these young minds, amplifying their voices and instilling confidence to effect positive change in their communities.

The session titled "Youth Voices: Unleashing the Potential of the Next Generation" enriched the conference experience and provided a powerful reminder of the importance of engaging young voices in decision-making.

We can pave the way for a brighter and more inclusive future by actively involving youth in discussions and listening to their perspectives. APP

as an inspiration to many. This Session aimed to raise awareness and promote dialogue, inspiring individuals and communities to break down all the barriers and create a more inclusive society for women. Women are our pride. They never tire or complain but are always ready to contribute to the community. Speaking at the occasion, Ms. Shad Begum, Ms. Kamat Zia, Ms. Shaqfa Malik, a Women Parliamentarian, Dr. Perisha Peracha, and Dr. Noor Jehan EwVC, Swabi said that the KP Women are no exception to this and have repeatedly proven that they are not behind in any count.

They have shown exceptional resilience and strength in the face of adversity and have persevered to impact their communities positively. As we celebrate the achievements of Pashtun women, we must also acknowledge the challenges they continue to face. Our society is responsible for creating an environment encouraging and supporting women to pursue their dreams and aspirations. In another session titled "Sustainable Tourism is the way forward for a better tomorrow," panelists said that as the tourism industry continues to grow, it is essential to ensure that it is sustainable and that the impact on the environment and local communities is minimal. To achieve this, we must focus on several areas, including human resources, academia, women's participation, and poverty alleviation.

They further said that human resources are the backbone of any industry, and tourism is no exception. Tourism businesses must invest in their employees and provide them with training and development opportunities. This will not only help to improve the quality of service but also increase employee satisfaction and retention. Investing in human resources can create a more sustainable tourism industry that benefits everyone involved.

Academia also has a significant role to play in the development of sustainable tourism. Research and education are crucial to promoting sustainable tourism practices and developing new sustainable tourism models. Academic institutions can generate knowledge, raise awareness, and provide technical assistance to tourism businesses. By working together, academia and the tourism industry can create a more sustainable future for everyone. Women's participation in tourism is another critical area that needs attention. Women have traditionally been underrepresented in the tourism industry, particularly in leadership roles. However, women's participation in the tourism industry can have significant economic and social benefits. We can create a more sustainable and inclusive tourism industry by empowering women and providing them equal opportunities. Poverty is also a significant hurdle in the development of sustainable tourism. Many tourism destinations are located in developing countries, where poverty is prevalent. Sustainable tourism can help to alleviate poverty by creating jobs, stimulating local economies, and supporting community development. We can create a more equitable and just world by prioritizing sustainable tourism.

Two thought-provoking sessions, the intense Hardware vs. Soft Skills debate, highlighted the importance of balancing technical expertise with interpersonal abilities. And the discussion on embracing the bio-economy was also taken place. Dr. Durre Niyab, a renowned researcher, expert, and advocate for youth empowerment, took center stage to facilitate an engaging and dynamic session titled "Youth Voices: Unleashing the Potential of the Next Generation." The Session, held as an Open Mic Session, provided an invaluable opportunity for young individuals to actively participate and express their thoughts on the recently concluded two-day conference. The Session served as a platform for the youth to directly question and comment on the ideas, discussions, and themes explored during the conference. With passion and enthusiasm, they fearlessly shared their perspectives, concerns, and visions for the future. Dr. Durre Niyab skillfully guided the Session, ensuring every participant had a voice and their contributions were valued.

One of the highlights of the Session was the presence of experts from various fields attending the conference. These experts generously lent their knowledge and experience to answer the queries raised by the youth. The symbiotic exchange between the next generation and seasoned professionals fostered a sense of mentorship and collaboration.
